8. No particulars are known about the Miskolcz AA artillery abteilung.
9. Training: Recruits first receive a six weeks' basic infantry training, according to standard plan. The batteries later have to give one day a week to infantry combat training. Alert drills are held once or twice weekly usually at night, followed by combat exercises. The antiaircraft artillery intensively practices defense against parachute troops; combat with tanks; defense against infantry attack.
10. Antiaircraft artillery officers received the following preliminary training:
 - 1-5 March 1952, at Esztergom: defense against tank attacks.
 - 10-14 March, between Lepsény and Lajos-Komárom: operations in unison with an armored division in the field, followed by taking over the air defense while the division takes battle station.
 - 15-21 May, at Drégelypalánk: Combined operations of several batteries against aerial targets (with three batteries).
11. Discipline is severe throughout the entire service. The control is continuous and strict. Morale is mixed and uneven. The officers are 90 percent Communists; the enlisted men about 10 percent. The food is ample and very good. An ordinary private is paid 64 forints a month; an acting corporal 74 forints. The uniforms are of good cut and material.
